“They saved my life.”

At 62, Nick Aston was spending his retirement traveling the Pacific Northwest and Florida. • It was on a visit home that he awoke with severe pressure in his chest. • He went to Hillcrest Medical Center where a team of cardiologists was waiting to treat him. • Testing revealed he had three blocked arteries. • Within minutes a balloon angioplasty was performed and stents were inserted. • A few days later, Nick was released to Hillcrest’s outpatient cardiac rehab program. • Today Nick is feeling better than ever and is back on the road.
